Jack

- ▶ Jack's parents are divorced. Jack lives primarily with his mom so he used her information on the FAFSA. During the verification process, the college discovered that his mom makes $30,000 per year and lives in an $800,000 home. His dad is a doctor, lives in another state, and pays child support. It appears on paper that dad must be helping mom with house payments.

Since it looks like dad pays more financially, should Jack make corrections to his FAFSA and be required to use his dad's financial information on the FAFSA?

Brian

- ▶ Brian was involved in a car accident when he was 12. It was determined that the driver of the other vehicle was fully responsible. Due to the severity of his injuries and long-term medical treatments, he was given a large settlement that was put into a trust fund to cover the medical expenses. Does the trust fund need to be counted on the FAFSA?
